GRISSOM READY FOR SPACEMAN SHOT

K Gets A Big No On Berlin Deal

By STEWART HENSLEY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, Britain and France today turned down Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's proposals aimed at forcing the allies out of Red-encircled West Berlin.

In similar notes delivered to the Kremlin shortly after noon Moscow time, the Western Big Three called instead for free elections in East Germany as part of a basic approach to solving the entire problem of divided Germany.

The White House announced that the text of the U. S. note will be made public at 10 a. m. EDT Tuesday.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger declined to give any indication of the U. S. position outlined in the note concerning Communist threats to cut off Western access to Berlin.

But it appeared certain the allies would re-emphasize that they have no intention of yielding their rights in the former German capital 100 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

The Western note climaxed more than six weeks of allied consultation sparked by Khrushchev's renewed Berlin and German demands which he made at his Vienna meeting with President Kennedy early in June. The U. S. note is a reply to an aide memoir which Khrushchev delivered at that time. The British and French notes are in response to oral presentation of the same demands voiced to their representatives by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Officials said the Western notes dismiss Khrushchev's call for an immediate peace conference of all nations which fought against Nazi Germany. The Allies point out that the primary responsibility under wartime agreements rests with the Big Four—the United States, Russia, Britain and France.

The United States and its Allies, officials added, reject categorically Khrushchev's demand that lacking a peace treaty, the Western powers pull out of West Berlin and permit it to become a demilitarized "free city" under some form of international supervision.

In addition, they make it clear that the Western powers do not recognize Russia's right to make a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany. Khrushchev has threatened to do this if the three Allies refuse to accept the Kremlin's peace terms.

The allies are particularly concerned with Khrushchev's warning that he will make a separate treaty with Communist East Germany by the end of the year and give the puppet regime "control over the vital allied access routes from West Germany to West Berlin. The three Allies do not recognize East Germany.

Attending the funeral from Murray were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pat James, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey James, and Esley Johnson. Others from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Cordis James of Detroit, and Mrs. Ralph Paschall of Cullinan, Illinois.

Washington Report

by Congressman Frank A. Stubblefield

Kentucky Bankers Group Visits Washington
I enjoyed visiting with the group of Kentucky bankers whose deep interest in agriculture, brought them to Washington July 10-11. The group spent one day at the Agriculture Research Service Experiment Station in Beltsville, Maryland, just outside Washington.

The second day they had a breakfast honoring Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Frank J. Welch, and the Kentucky Congressional Delegation. After the breakfast I had the pleasure of welcoming them to my office. At noon they had an informal session with Agriculture Secretary Freeman after which they met with officials of the Federal Reserve System.

Western Kentucky was well represented in the group with John Williams, Chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the Kentucky Bankers Association, and F. M. Wilcox and R. T. Daum, all of Princeton; Ryan Mason, Hopkinsville; Pat McCuiston, Pembroke; Harvey Ellis, Murray; Johnny Graham, Louisville, formerly from Murray; Glenn Henderson, Glasgow, formerly from Gracey; William C. Johnstone, for many years county agricultural extension agent in Paducah, and who is currently agricultural representative of the Association, accompanied the group.

Water Pollution Bill Enacted
The House of Senate concluded action last week and sent to the President the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1961. This act is of vital importance to Western Kentucky. The Western Kentucky area includes the mouths of the Ohio, Tennessee, Cumberland, and Clinch Rivers, and many other smaller rivers and streams.

The problem of stream pollution is greatest down stream. Also, keeping Kentucky Lake and Barkley Lake free of pollution from raw or inadequately treated sewage is a must.

The bill increases the amount of cost sharing assistance the federal government can provide as well as adding teeth to existing water pollution control laws. The bill also authorizes expansion of research into water pollution control and sewage treatment methods.

Word Comes That Everything Is "A-OK" For Second Flight

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.
United Press International
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Everything is "AOK" for America's second man-in-space venture.

Grissom, at 150 pounds, is the smallest of the seven Mercury astronauts. The Redstone rocket now poised on pad No. 5 will hurl him about 115 miles into space and 300 miles out to sea on a path roughly paralleling Shepard's flight.

The final 12-hour final count-down in preparation for Grissom's hop started at 8 a. m. EDT today. The weather, which had delayed Shepard's flight, looked just right for Grissom's.

Ahead of Grissom as the sun rose today were 24 hours of final physical examinations, electrical and mechanical checks on his "Liberty Bell" space capsule and Redstone rocket booster, and last-minute instructions.

And, perhaps the hardest part of it all, waiting.

Grissom and his astronaut running-mate, Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., returned to their work today after a Sunday of rest and relaxation, their last before the Tuesday morning launch.

The final "flight countdown" was scheduled to begin at 8 a. m. EDT today. Grissom, Glenn and their five fellow astronauts, and scientists in charge of the nation's $400 million "Project Mercury" program, returned to the job of getting the man and machine ready.

Late weather forecasts indicated little possibility of a delay from that quarter. The morning forecast said conditions were expected to be within the prescribed limits and added that the weather "is not expected to be any great concern" in Tuesday's firing.

SIGNS WITH KNICKS

Who Can Stop Those Tigers? They Are The Cause of Detroit's Lead

By MILTON RICHMAN

United Press International

It's easy to say that tiger but hat do you do when there's a pair of 'em like Rocky Colavito and Norm Cash on the loose? Nobody could hold either Sunday, much less both, and that in a nutshell is the reason why the Detroit Tigers are back on top in the American League today.

Between them, Colavito and Cash ripped Kansas City's pitching for 16 total bases and 12 runs batted in during a doubleheader. Detroit swept the two games, 11-1 and 8-3, thus taking over first place by one percentage point from the New York Yankees, who beat the Baltimore Orioles, 2-1.

Pagan Wins Ninth

Colavito drove in five runs in the nightcap with his 23rd and 24th homers, while Cash, who contributed a three-run double in the opener, belted his 26th home run with one on in the nightcap. Rookie Dick McAuliffe also homered in the second game to help Phil Pagan win his ninth victory.

Southpaw Don Mossi limited the Minnesota Twins, 7-5, but dropped the nightcap, 12-5. The Los Angeles Angels beat the Washington Senators, 11-2, then lost the second game, 4-3, in 10 innings, and Boston split with Chicago, the White Sox tying the opener, 4-3 and the Red Sox taking the 12-inning nightcap, 5-3.

Red Lead Cut

Cincinnati's lead in the National League was sliced to five games when the Chicago Cubs defeated the Reds, 4-2, and the Los Angeles Dodgers outlasted the Pittsburgh Pirates, 12-11. The San Francisco Giants downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-3, and the Milwaukee Braves trounced the St. Louis Cardinals, 9-1.

Mickey Mantle drove in both of the Yankees' runs against the Orioles with his 32nd homer and a ninth-inning double that broke up a 1-1 tie. Bud Daley hurled a four-hitter and survived a ninth-inning threat to gain his fifth victory. Loser Steve Barber yielded only five hits.

Two home runs by Chuck Essegian and one by Johnny Romano paced the Indians to their opening game victory over the Twins. Gary Bell 6-9 was the winner. Lennie Green collected five hits for Minnesota in the nightcap. Don Lee registering his first victory by allowing only one run after taking over for starter Bert Cuete in the third inning.

Steve Bilko and Ken Hunt each hit three-run homers in the Angels' first game victory over the Senators. Jim Donahue was the winner and Ed Nebaugh the loser. In the nightcap, however, the Senators scored the winning run in the 10th on a throwing error by catcher Del Rice. Ryne Duren 3-10 was the victim of the miscue. Reliever Dave Sisler was the winning pitcher and is now 2-4.

Win In Ninth

Minnie Mines's two-run single with two out in the ninth inning brought the White Sox their first game victory, which was credited to reliever Frank Baumann 6-7. Carrell Mardy singled home the winning run for the Red Sox in the 12th inning of the nightcap, bringing Dave Hillman his third victory. Gary Geiger and Floyd Robinson hit homers.

George Altman's 16th home run in the sixth inning snapped a 2-2 tie between the Cubs and Reds, and the winners added an insurance run off Jim Brasnan in the seventh. Boz Anderson blanked Cincinnati over the last 3 1/2 innings to preserve Dick Ellsworth's fifth win. Rookie Ken Hunt suffered his fifth setback compared with nine victories.

Roseboro Paces Dodgers

John Roseboro of the Dodgers hit his 15th homer during a two-run rally that tied the score in the ninth and then tripled home the winning run against the Pirates in the 10th. Pittsburgh had five homers — two by Bill Mareski, and one each by Don Hoak, Dick Stuart and Roberto Clemente — but they couldn't save Roy Face from his fourth defeat.

Willie Mays hit a pair of homers, his 25th and 26th, and Matty Alou smacked his fourth of the season with two on to power the Giants to their victory over the Phillies. Sam Jones, making his first start since June 13, struck out nine and won his seventh game although Stu Miller relieved him in the eighth. Jim Owens 1-3 was the loser.

Joe Adcock hit two homers and Lee Maye hit in the Braves' victory over the Cardinals. Rookie Bob Hendley was the winner but gave way to Don Nettebart in the seventh after Carl Warwick hit pinch homer and Curt Flood singled. Al Cicotte was the loser.

WAITING FOR A FLY?—No, this isn't a spider waiting for a fly, just an employee at the Westinghouse atomic equipment plant in Chewick, Pa., inspecting a final assembly of a canned motor pump to be used in cooling system of a nuclear power generating station. Canned motor pumps must be able to withstand up to 2,000 pounds pressure and high temperatures, but cannot leak a drop while pumping thousands of gallons of water a minute through reactor. The "white stripes" are rows of ceramic blocks between coils of the motor's stator core, to support an inconel "can" or sealing tube which keeps water from reaching the motor windings.

CHAPTER 17

NILS CHRISTENSEN looked back at the staretin, which reared up like a tower in the plain between the black scar and the first ragged flanks of ruin.

"It looks terribly exposed, doesn't it?" he said. "Out there in the open."

DeWitt grinned briefly, "Still trying to frighten me with thirty-thousand-year-old bogey-men. Well, there's been no sign of them and I don't think there will be. Time wins every war, Chris. But I'll tell you something. I'd be glad to know they did still exist, and I'd be glad to meet them. The Vanyrn has a technology that in some ways makes ours look childish, and yet the enemy beat them, crushed them, swept them clean out of space. Think what their technology must have been! Think of the things they could teach us."

"Yes," said Christensen. He looked back once more at the ship, and was silent.

"Look for inscriptions, Fairlie," DeWitt said. "Anything, even one word."

They walked slowly among the ruins in the yellow sunlight, under the copper sky.

The Gassendi zone, which had presumably been destroyed much earlier than this place on the home-world, had remained intact even to pieces of cloth and paper, but that was on the sterile Moon where nothing ever changes. Here there were wind and rain, oxidation, bacteria, the ceaseless working of decay. The time-grained stone retained no semblance of their former shape or usefulness. Rusty red seams among the grass-roots appeared once to have been metal. That was all. Storm and flood, wind-drifted dust and natural erosion had filled the pits and hollows and brought the high places crumbling down until it was all one level nothingness.

"You won't find any inscriptions here," Fairlie said. "Probably not anywhere, but certainly not on the surface."

DeWitt stood with his shoulders hunched and his jaw set. "We'll dig," he said. "Aerial photography may give us an idea where the center of the city was, the government buildings where the important records were kept. Maybe the vaults would have held all right, especially if they were sunk in rock. We'll dig."

"You'd better be lucky," Fairlie said. "A job like that could take you more years than any of us have left."

DeWitt glowered at him and turned back.

Christensen had been sitting on a stone. He looked exhausted and his breathing was labored.

THOMSON said the material was some sort of plastic-like cement with the water-resistant properties of glass, so that deterioration had been incredibly slow. The Vanyrn had built for the ages. But this age had been too long, even for them.

Floodlights blazed, casting harsh shadows among the ruins. Hoops of dirt lay about, filled with undisturbable rubble, bits of stone. The scoops gnawed carefully away at more of the earth in the excavation. So far there was no sign of anything. So far there was no sign of anything.

DeWitt was by no means ready to give up.

"We'll just move and dig a new place else. Sooner or later we'll turn up something. There's got to be something left."

"Why?" asked Fairlie. "Because you say so?" He got up. "Call me if you find a large inscription. I'm going back to the ship."

Christensen was sleeping when he got back to the ship. Everybody else, it seemed, was either sleeping or engrossed in work. Fairlie ate and then lay down on his own couch, far too restless and disturbed, he thought, to sleep, but he was physically weary from hours of hanging about the damned silly excavation and he wanted to rest.

He did not know that he had slept until he felt a shaking and pushed up startled to see the face of the young flight technician named Smith bent over him.

"Doctor Fairlie, DeWitt's on the walkie-talkie. He wants you right away."

Fairlie tried to force the cobwebs out of his brain. "Has he found something?" He swung his feet to the floor.

Smith's eyes were bright and his voice had a quality of high excitement.

"I don't know, but the way he spoke — I think something's found him."

The line went dead with a fearsome message — What and how bring the story to a climax here Monday.

BIRTHPLACE OF TRAIL TO SANTA FE LURES VISITORS TO KANSAS

COUNCIL GROVE, Kan.—This town's "telling card," "Birthplace of the Santa Fe Trail," bewilders travelers who insist the 780-mile route to Santa Fe, N.M., started at Independence, Mo.

Geographically, they are correct. The Santa Fe Trail had its physical beginning in Independence, but its legal origin was here, where three U.S. commissioners and their aides met with Osage Indians beneath an oak tree and completed negotiations for purchase of the right of way.

The terms of purchase: $500 cash and $300 worth of shining trinkets.

Tourists visiting Kansas during the state's 100th birthday year have been flocking here in large numbers. Council Grove, with its tall bay windows and square pillars, is rated as one of the most historic towns on the Santa Fe Trail.

In Less Formal Days Bank Kept Cash In Woodpile

By JAMES J. DOYLE

United Press International
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—An individual can keep his money where he likes, in a money belt, a mattress or a woodpile.

But when a bank keeps the deposits in a woodpile, it does give rise to some concern.

The banks of today are fine structures, molded of steel and stone and principle. But the history of the Old West, and Oregon in particular, reveals banking procedures that make one wonder how we got this far.

Not until 1907 were state banks in Oregon subject to examination. As a result, the assets and transactions of the banks were not segregated from those of the owner. For many years banks continued to be operated in a corner or across an end of a general store.

Snowden Guy Sargent, a bank examiner at the turn of the century, records many strange banking practices.

In one bank, he found the books $3,000 dollars short. This appeared to be a shock to the banker. A second and third count still showed a shortage. After a bit of head scratching, the banker remembered.

He led Sargent to a woodshed at the rear of the bank and busied himself lifting wood from a pile. Finally he pulled out a sack containing the missing funds.

He explained that the bank had only a small safe which was not burglar proof. If it were robbed, the bank would save at least some of the money.

In another case, Sargent found the combination of the safe written on a small piece of paper pasted to the safe.

The reasoning was that since the safe was not burglar proof, the burglar would not blow up the safe. And though they might lose the assets, they still would have the safe.

In an old country bank, Sargent found the books $1,000 short. The banker looked around and then whispered to the examiner, "Wait a minute. I'll get it for you."

He stepped over to an old table, stacked high with paper, boxes and debris. From this he pulled out a cigar box containing several hundred dollars in gold. A similar amount was found under the fuel in a wood box. Still more was found beneath the ashes in a stove.

He explained that the money would be safer almost anywhere than in the safe. After Sargent examined the safe, he agreed.

According to O. K. Burrell of the University of Oregon, some Northwest banks had strange beginnings.

Pioneer merchants and express companies often accepted special deposits such as gold dust and pouches of cash. This did not actually constitute banking, although Burrell says many banks did evolve from this practice.

Stars Join College In Try To Create National Theatre

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Hollywood and Broadway stars have joined with a college dean to help create what they hope will grow into a national American theatre.

The dream began with Dr. Abbott Kaplan, associate dean of the University of California Extension Division. And it started to move toward reality three years ago when producers, executives and stars such as Shelley Winters and Eva Marie Saint met with him and other college officials at Lake Arrowhead near here and formed the University Extension Theatre Group.

Since then, the all-professional productions on campus at the University of California at Los Angeles have featured many high-priced actors working for minimum wages: Robert Ryan, Marc Platt, Nina Foch, Dean Stockwell, Diana Lynn, Joseph Wiseman, Doris Dowling, Gladys Cooper, Gloria Grahame, Jan Sterling and others.

The productions, drawing sell-out audiences, have ranged from John Dos Passos' "USA" to U.S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" to Chekhov's "The Three Sisters" to the smash hit, "A Raisin in the Sun."

At present, Kaplan feels there may be a move among other university extension departments in the nation to form an actual college-sponsored theatre circuit on which his group's productions could tour after they've opened at UCLA.

"In addition," he said, "we are hoping that other universities and colleges could form their own professional groups to go on tour on a circuit as well as cooperating with independent repertory troupes like the Goodman Theatre in Chicago."

Kaplan originally conceived his dream to improve the "death of good theatre in Los Angeles" and because he felt a renaissance of good American stage plays is due, but probably won't come from Broadway because of commercial concerns.

"There is an audience that wants to see serious, important and artistic plays," he said, "and community and university theatres around the country can contribute to a possible rebirth of the American stage."

Kaplan's group is non-student and therein come some of the practical problems in forming a national theatre.

"Our professional actors have their own commitments to the commercial theatre, movies, television and radio," he said. "Many have worked for us at great personal sacrifice. And naturally we would want to send only original casts on the road."

"If we eventually are to have a real national theatre, we must have a federal government subsidy. That's the way it's done in Europe. There they have help not only from the federal government but from local governments as well. Because of that, for instance, Germany has developed many theatres since the war."

Another major problem for Kaplan is that his group does not have a permanent theater in which to show its plays. It shuttles from hall to hall on the UCLA campus using whatever building is available.

"We must have a permanent building to have a national theatre — and the university has finally set aside land for us. But since we are not a state school, we must now raise the money on our own to put up the building. It'll be tough because we don't have an expense-account audience."

The dream began with Dr. Abbott Kaplan, associate dean of the University of California Extension Division. And it started to move toward reality three years ago when producers, executives and stars such as Shelley Winters and Eva Marie Saint met with him and other college officials at Lake Arrowhead near here and formed the University Extension Theatre Group.

Since then, the all-professional productions on campus at the University of California at Los Angeles have featured many high-priced actors working for minimum wages: Robert Ryan, Marc Platt, Nina Foch, Dean Stockwell, Diana Lynn, Joseph Wiseman, Doris Dowling, Gladys Cooper, Gloria Grahame, Jan Sterling and others.

The productions, drawing sell-out audiences, have ranged from John Dos Passos' "USA" to U.S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" to Chekhov's "The Three Sisters" to the smash hit, "A Raisin in the Sun."

At present, Kaplan feels there may be a move among other university extension departments in the nation to form an actual college-sponsored theatre circuit on which his group's productions could tour after they've opened at UCLA.

"In addition," he said, "we are hoping that other universities and colleges could form their own professional groups to go on tour on a circuit as well as cooperating with independent repertory troupes like the Goodman Theatre in Chicago."

Kaplan originally conceived his dream to improve the "death of good theatre in Los Angeles" and because he felt a renaissance of good American stage plays is due, but probably won't come from Broadway because of commercial concerns.

"There is an audience that wants to see serious, important and artistic plays," he said, "and community and university theatres around the country can contribute to a possible rebirth of the American stage."

Kaplan's group is non-student and therein come some of the practical problems in forming a national theatre.

"Our professional actors have their own commitments to the commercial theatre, movies, television and radio," he said. "Many have worked for us at great personal sacrifice. And naturally we would want to send only original casts on the road."

"If we eventually are to have a real national theatre, we must have a federal government subsidy. That's the way it's done in Europe. There they have help not only from the federal government but from local governments as well. Because of that, for instance, Germany has developed many theatres since the war."

Another major problem for Kaplan is that his group does not have a permanent theater in which to show its plays. It shuttles from hall to hall on the UCLA campus using whatever building is available.

"We must have a permanent building to have a national theatre — and the university has finally set aside land for us. But since we are not a state school, we must now raise the money on our own to put up the building. It'll be tough because we don't have an expense-account audience."

The CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 34 When Maj. Pierre Gustave Tostant Beauregard of Louisiana, who was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1838, No. 2 in a class of 45, was named its superintendent 23 years later, his term lasted a week. Within that week of January 1861, he advised a cadet from Louisiana that he himself would go with the state if it seceded. The remark reached the Chief of Staff, Winfield Scott, a Virginian, who took his oath of loyalty to the United States seriously. Beauregard, who served on Scott's staff in the Mexican War, was regarded highly by the old general up till then.

The Louisiana also was highly regarded by the former secretary of war, Jefferson Davis. Within days after Beauregard resigned from the federal service, he was appointed brigadier-general in the Confederate Army and sent to command the reduction of Fort Sumter. "The Hero of Sumter" was called by Davis to the new Rebel capital, Richmond, on June 1, 1861, and assigned to command of the Confederate troops on the Alexandria line.

Most of the Confederate active force was grouped around Manassas Junction. The strategic value of this point, which had no natural defensive advantages, was that its position close to Washington enabled the Confederates to observe closely the army then being assembled near Arlington by Gen. Irwin McDowell, for an offensive movement against Richmond.

McDowell had been a classmate of Beauregard's at West Point. The Southerner believed he knew which way McDowell's mind ran. He evolved a plan of operation calculated to anticipate McDowell's moves and effect a defeat of McDowell's army—thereby "insuring the liberation of Maryland and the capture of Washington." The plan, dispatched to Richmond by courier, was rejected by Davis and his military advisers (Adjutant-General Cooper and General Lee) as "brilliant and comprehensive but essentially impracticable."

Nevertheless, McDowell was to be licked when he came up against Beauregard and Joe Johnston at Bull Run. (The story of that battle is to be told here later.)

Gen. Beauregard and signature in 1861, from an engraving published in his lifetime. When the general died in 1893, a later-day autograph of his was well-known to Northern buyers of tickets in the Louisiana Lottery, for which he acted as a sponsor. He was known, too, for debates in print with other Confederate generals concerning which one lost the war.
